Watch out for dubious financial service providers

Brazen financial service providers are currently increasingly tempting customers looking to invest with promises of high yields

Faced with the current low-interest period, investors are sorely tempted to entrust those providers with their money which offer high yields. But the higher the yield, the higher generally the risk. Frequently, particularly attractive offers frequently have rather dubious or even illegal providers hiding behind them. The higher the profits promised then, the more thoroughly investors should check providers and their offers before deciding on any investments.
