New stories from everyday digital life

With their exploits, the fictitious Webster family encourages the population to use caution when moving around the networked world. On 27th October, twelve new stories have now been published in comic strip form.

The six members of the Webster family fall victim to various unpleasant situations and dangers in everyday digital life which we could all face. Their exploits are part of a prevention campaign of various federal agencies and the Schweizerische Kriminalprävention meant to sensitize the Swiss population to the everyday challenges of the digital world. The comics of this latest series deal with topics such as roaming, investing into cryptocurrencies, online conspiracy theories, online challenges or smartphone dependency.

These “stories from everyday digital life” are now available as a brochure or on www.websters.swiss (<http://www.websters.swiss>) free of charge.
